

My husband is a truck driver...sometimes spending as much as 2 weeks on the road. I gave him an XM Radio subscription as a gift. Since that time, my husband listens almost continuously to XM...talk shows, weather information, traffic information. My husband listens to these channels constantly so he can do his job more efficiently, and to keep abreast of what's going on in the world....and also, just for entertainment. You may think this sad, but XM Radio is a true "friend" for him when he's on the road..he's NEVER "alone".It seems ludicrous to me that there should be any governmental control in the programming of XM Radio--something that is beneficial to so many. Try spending a week or so alone...with only XM to keep you company--knowing it's the only method one can have for assistance with one's occupation, as well as giving a choice for what he listens to. We pay for this service, and we do so because it offers something worthwhile. This is, and should continue to be..a means of offering something a consumer really needs, and enjoys. The changes XM offers are changes made for the listener's lifestyles.PLEASE.....leave the control of XM Radio selections right where it belongs....with XM Sattelite and with the consumer.
